Plot Cartoon!

On the back are six boxes for a cartoon comic strip.
Each box represents one part of the plot diagram.
Draw an important picture for each box (yes, stick figures are ok :)
What your characters say in the boxes should also be the most important parts of the story.

Here's some information to help you create your cartoon:

* Exposition: the beginning of the story where we learn about the setting and main character
  Inciting incident: the thing that happens that starts all the problems for the story.

* Rising Action: the problems in the story that build up like a ladder

* Turning Point (aka "climax") The worst part of the story- the biggest problem that is the worst thing for the character to be going through

* Falling Action: what happens right after the turning point (what happens that "saves" the character)

© languageartsteachers.com

* Resolution: the end of the story- how it all works out

| EXPOSITION | INCITING INCIDENT | RISING ACTION |
|---|---|---|
| | | |
| TURNING POINT | FALLING ACTION | RESOLUTION |
| | | |

© languageartsteachers.com

On a piece of notebook paper, write a summary of what is happening in your story, adding information and details that you didn't get to show in the boxes above.

© languageartsteachers.com